Glenda Meads Architects 1ST

This story-and-a-half house was designed for open-plan entertaining. All primary functions are on the main level, including the master bedroom suite and office; additional bedrooms are on the upper level. The style is in the Prairie School tradition, with low-slung masses stepping back from the main entry, low-pitch roofs, and deep overhangs. The interior flows from a central entry hall that extends from the front all the way to the back and out to a rear terrace. Rich wood accents all the architectural elements, while the main level is furnished with deep but shiny metal tones.
